

- WCBM News Brief -

[Note: We were not able to get a complete copy of the brief that ran on WCBM, but below is the gist of the piece.]

Earlier today a new study was released that focuses on the health care concerns of low-income and homeless people in Baltimore. The study was the focus of a press conference at HERO on Maryland Avenue. The survey found that more than 80% of that population reports being uninsured in the recent past. OSI, who sponsored the report, finds that critical care is replacing preventative care.